

A Taste of Texas in a Bottle

Sip and Savor the Unique Wines of Central Texas

Meadows and streams, vibrant wildflowers, rolling hills and a mild climate make the Texas countryside stand out as one of the prettiest areas in the South. These amazing climate features create the perfect environment for prosperous vineyards where grape vines bear fruit to create the unique, prize-winning wine flavors that can only be produced in the heart of Texas.

A TASTE OF TEXAS IN A BOTTLE ICON KEY:

Serves/Sells Food Onsite (Market or Restaurant Style)

Tasting rooms often sell other Texas made products such as jams, tapenades, salsas, artisan cheeses and baked goods in a market-style setup. Alternatively, many locations also have an onsite restaurant or cafe attached on the same grounds. See website or call ahead for details.

Has an Onsite Tasting Room

Try before you buy! Some tastings are complimentary and some are for a small cost. See website or call ahead for details.

Guided Public Tours

Learn the basic wine making processes from vine to bottle from the professionals. See website or call ahead for details.

Hosts Event Rental Space

These locations offer a charming and relaxing setting for all occasions, including weddings and dinner parties. From the most intimate to the grandest celebration, you and your guests are sure to have an unforgettable experience. Call ahead or check the location website for event planning and reservation details.

Produces Red Wine Varieties

Red wines are made from red grapes, and they have a longer maturing time than white wines. On a whole, they are also heavier. The color of red wine comes from the skin of the grapes. The winegrower allows the skins' tannins and flavors to be transferred into the must, and the quality and quantity of these play an important role in the further maturing process. The amount of tannin in the must also has a considerable influence on the taste of the wine - it can make the red wine bitter, or it can have a key positive effect on the wine's texture. Due to their preserving effect, the quantity of tannins and acid determines the wine's suitability for aging.

Pairing: As a rule of thumb, choose red wines to serve with beef, game dishes and heavier meals.

Common Texas Red Wines include:

Malbec, Tempranillo, Merlot, Cabernet Sauvignon, among others.

Produces White Wine Varieties

White wines are nearly always pressed from white grapes and, in general, have a fresh, fruity flavor. They often contain less alcohol and are frequently more acidic than red wines.

Although white wines are typically drunk young, some can age for up to 25 years and even longer, such as American Chardonnays or white Burgundies, which aim for richness rather than crispness and acidity.

Pairing: As a rule of thumb, white wine is generally served with poultry, fish, and highly flavored foods.

Common Texas White Wines include: Chardonnay, Riesling, Sauvignon Blanc, Rosé, among others.

Produces Dessert Wine Varieties

There is no simple definition of a dessert wine. In the United States, a dessert wine is legally defined as any wine over 14% alcohol by volume, which includes all fortified wines.

Pairing: A general rule is that the wine should be sweeter than the food it is served with.

Common Dessert Wines include: Port, Muscat, Ice Wine, Sherry, among others.

Produces Sparkling or Semi-sparkling Wines

A wine with significant levels of carbon dioxide in it making it fizzy. The carbon dioxide may result from natural fermentation, either in a bottle (as with the méthode champenoise), in a large tank designed to withstand the pressures involved (as in the Charmat process), or as a result of carbon dioxide injection.

Pairing: Sparkling varieties are very flexible when it comes to pairing. Some prefer a saltier pairing such as mild to strong cheeses, caviar, or paté. Others prefer a sweeter pairing with cake or fresh fruit.

Common Sparkling Wines include:

Prosecco, Cava, Champagne, among others.

VINEYARD & WINERY COMBOS

A vineyard is often characterized by its terroir, a French term loosely translating as “a sense of place” that refers to the specific geographical and geological characteristics of grapevine plantations, which may be imparted in the wine. Texas land serves as a perfect location for growing quality grapes; the intense Texas sun by day and the cooler nights give the grapes a quality flavor, ideal for wines. These grape-bearing vine plantations all produce different varieties of grapes as well as produce their own brands of wine in their own winery. The number next to each vineyard refers to the corresponding position on the vineyard and winery locations map on page 1.

WINERIES

A winery is a building or property involved in the production of wine. Besides wine-making equipment, larger wineries may also feature warehouses, bottling lines, laboratories, and large expanses of tanks known as tank farms. Wineries typically employ winemakers to produce various wines from grapes by following the winemaking process. This process involves the fermentation of fruit, as well as blending and aging of the juice. The grapes may be from vineyards owned by the winery or may be brought in from other locations. The number next to each winery refers to the corresponding position on the vineyard and winery locations map on page 1.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF WINE MAKING IN TEXAS

California often receives the most credit for wine production in the United States, but almost a century before California vineyards were established, the Spanish missionaries began cultivating Texas grapes around the 1700's in what is now El Paso, Texas.

Grapes have grown naturally along rivers and streams in Texas for thousands of years. A wide diversity of genetically unique grape species have been identified as native to Texas. There are six basic types of grapes grown in Texas: Vitis vinifera, French X American hybrids, American varieties, Muscadines, rootstocks and native species. The Texas wine industry is 99% Vitis vinifera. These are the classic wine grapes of Europe which are also grown in California, and all other major wine regions of the world.

It is the German and Italian immigrants who are recognized for starting Texas winemaking. In the early 1800's, European settlers brought grape vine cuttings from their native countries to south and central Texas to start new vineyards.

An interesting bit of trivia: in 1888, the French government presented Thomas Munson, a horticulturist and breeder of grapes in Texas, with the French Legion of Honor Chevalier du Mérite Agricole award for his Texas-grown Phylloxera-resistant rootstock. It was his rootstock development and research that provided European grape growers with phylloxera-resistant stocks, allowing them to recover from the devastating epidemic of the late 19th century while still growing the ancient Vitis vinifera cultivars. Thomas Munson is credited as saving France's wine industry. One of Munson's key understandings and contributions to solving the Phloxerra problem in France was in recognizing that, of all areas of the United States, Central Texas had the soils that had the most in common with those of the winegrowing areas of France.

By the early 1900's, Texas had its own thriving wine industry with 25 wineries in operation.

Wineries in Texas suffered their own setback as a result of the Prohibition passed by the 18th Amendment in 1919. The wine drought lasted until 1935 with repeal of the Prohibition. It wasn't until the 1970's that a resurgence of the Texas wine industry appeared. In 1986, the Texas Wine & Food Festival was launched, creating a high-profile showcase for the local wines of Texas.

Today, the Texas wine industry is home to over 180 wineries, employs over 9,000 Texans, and ranks fifth in wine production after the top wine states: California, New York, Washington and Oregon. That's not to say they produce better wine than that grown in the Texas Hill Country, more than a few Texas wineries lay claim to that honor.
